

Stegner House Artist In Residence

May is proving to be a very busy month for art and culture in Eastend, greatly to the talents of Diana Chabros and Joseph Naytowhow

Joseph Naytowhow and Diana Chabros will be artists in residence in the Stegner House for the month of May. Naytowhow and Chabros are delighted to be back in Eastend. They have been here in all most every season, spending time with the land and the people who live here. They hope to work on separate art and performance pieces, as well as collaborate on a book they are writing.

During their time here in Eastend, they will be very active in the community of Eastend and in Shaunavon.

Joseph will be singing, telling stories, dancing, and drumming at the Eastend Historical Museums event May 19th at the Memorial Hall along with the Nikaneet drummers, and other guests Look for more information regarding this event!

Naytowhow hopes to spend time focusing on finding a new direction for his voice and song writing direction! He says there will be singing and the neighbours of the Stegner House not too worry if they hear strange sounds.

Diana Chabros tells her stories through the medium of oil painting, with her subject the Land and how industry effects the land. Her paintings will be shown at the AGES Gallery in the Eastend Library for the month of May. AGES will host an artist talk and reception the evening of Friday May 4th for Chabros' work. The show will be called 'Wish You Were Here; Postcards to the Land', The show is about our relentless pursuit of resources, the land as a living entity and a vessel for water and waterways. Diana hopes to record the land as it is now as she paints it with her eye as an artist. Chabros desire as she paints this body of work, is to become more connected to the land and her ancestors.
